00:00:06	Andy	Hi, I'm Andy, I'm from the Wirral in the UK. I'm currently about eight months into my PhD in Environmental and Geochemistry at the University of [unclear 00:00:16] in New Zealand. Welcome to my PhD video log. So previously, I studied geography at Liverpool John Moores University. That was a BSc
00:00:30		and then I went on to do an MSc in environment and climate change at the University of Liverpool. And now I'm here studying cave geochemistry mainly, with a view to understanding the effects of temperature change on [unclear 00:00:47] release of dissolved organic carbon from the soil. So through this video log series, I hope to share some of my experiences in moving to New Zealand, why I thought New Zealand might be a nice to live,
00:01:00		why I chose this university and this project, and I will also provide an insight into some of my lab work and field work as well. So thanks for watching.
